Prevention vs. Treatment: What’s the Right Balance?
Halley S. Faust and Paul T. Menzel, editors
Oxford University Press, October 2011

Table of Contents

1. Introduction
   Halley S. Faust and Paul T. Menzel

Part I. Evidence, Policy, and History

2. What Is Currently Spent on Prevention as Compared to Treatment?
   Charles Roehrig, George Miller, Paul Hughes-Cromwick, and Ani M. Turner

3. Prevention vs. Cure: An Economist’s Perspective on the Right Balance
   Louise B. Russell

4. The Evidence Based for Clinical Prevention: An Incomplete Story
   Robert B. Wallace

5. Prevention and the Science and Politics of Evidence
   Diana B. Petitti

6. Historical Perspectives on Structural Barriers to Prevention
   Halley S. Faust

Part II. Philosophical and Legal Analysis

7. Our Alleviation Bias: Why Do We Value Alleviating Harm More than Preventing Harm?
   Halley S. Faust

8. Treatment and Prevention: What Do We Owe Each Other?
   Norman Daniels

9. The Variable Value of Life and Fairness to the Already Ill: Two Promising but Tenuous Arguments for Treatment’s Priority
   Paul T. Menzel
10. The Slow Transition of U.S. Law Toward a Greater Emphasis on Prevention
   Thaddeus Mason Pope

11. Should the Value of Future Health Benefits Be Time-Discounted?
   Paul T. Menzel

Part III. Religious and Cultural Perspectives

12. Prevention vs. Treatment: How Do We Allocate Scarce Resources from Jewish Ethical Perspectives?
   Alan Jotkowitz and Shimon Glick

13. Cure vs. Prevention: Catholic Perspectives
   Nuala Kenny

14. Loving God and the Neighbor: Protestant Insights for Prevention and Treatment
   Aana Marie Vigen

15. Apocalypse and Health: Treatment and Prevention in the Seventh-day Adventist Tradition
   Roy Branson

16. Prevention vs. Treatment in Hong Kong: Constrained Utilitarianism with a Chinese Character
   Ho Mun Chan

Index